

Appointment of new CEO for Gambit Financial Solutions

Liège, 22nd November 2022

At the end of this year, Laurent Bodson has been appointed CEO of Gambit Financial Solutions. He takes over from Geoffroy de Schrevel who has been running the company since 2009 and left the company to pursue other opportunities.

“My ambition is to strengthen our growth while keeping our agile and sustainability-driven mindset. I have three essential focuses: fast delivery, security, and quality. Our way of working? An agile mindset and a strong tenacity combined with our, more than 15 years of, financial and digital expertise.” states Laurent Bodson.

As co-founder of Gambit and holder of a PhD in empirical finance, Laurent Bodson has extensive expertise in portfolio management and financial risk management. Successively holding the positions of Head of Solutions, COO and CCO of Gambit, he pursues Gambit’s ambition to put the customer at the heart of investment advice using innovative technologies.

Over its 15 years of existence, Gambit has progressively shifted from being a project-led FinTech start-up to a product-based solution provider offering a comprehensive stack of technology modules and services.

Through its cloud-based micro-service architecture, Gambit provides financial institutions with solutions that enable building A-to-Z investment advisory journeys: customer knowledge (KYC), investment recommendations, and wealth management as well as recommendation tracking. One of Gambit’s flagship offers is its Wealth as a Service proposition allowing to completely or partially outsource an investment offering. Based on Gambit’s standard capabilities and communicating APIs, players in the financial sector can create a unique investment offering specific to their needs and client expectations.
